“There’s no reason to think you can’t pursue STEM even if you’re not good at it. Once there’s a real-world application for the abstract information you’re taught in school, it only takes repetition to become good at whatever the task is.”

As the Co-Founder and Co-Owner at Gorge Greens, Elona Trogub produces microgreens with energy generated from wood waste. Through her involvement with the larger Wind River Project, she is developing a waste-to-energy food system.

FUN FACT: Elona used to be a goat herdess and cheesemaker.
